BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

A newspaper man, poet, and editor, William Vincent Byars was born June 21, 1857, in Covington, Tennessee. He was taught by his father, James Byars, principal of Tipton High School in Covington, who gave him a classical and scientific education. He began his career as an associate editor for the Weekly Record in Covington in 1877. In 1879, he moved to St. Louis where he worked for the St. Louis Daily Times. He later worked for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Missouri Republican, St. Louis Republic, and the St. Louis Chronicle. In 1893, he took a position with the New York World, remaining there for four years, before returning to St. Louis. He opened an office in the Temple Building, where he wrote poetry and articles for Reedy's Mirror and other publications. He was the managing editor for a 10-volume compilation titled The World's Best Orations, and also wrote several collections of poetry. Byars married Miss Loula Clement Collins in 1880, and in 1887 they moved to a home in Kirkwood, St. Louis County, Missouri. He died June 21, 1938, at his home in Kirkwood.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection includes correspondence of William V. Byars with numerous individuals including newspaper men, politicians, and literary figures. Principal correspondents include Arthur Brisbane, William Marion Reedy, and Byars' father, James Byars. The collection also contains poems and other writings of William V. Byars.

When this collection was processed in 2007-2008, the original arrangement was largely retained. It's unclear whether this arrangement reflected the order imposed by William V. Byars, the donor of the collection, or a previous Missouri Historical Society archivist. The collection is arranged in the following series:

The William V. Byars' Correspondence Series (1878-1919) is the largest series and consists primarily of correspondence to William V. Byars from numerous correspondents. Among the topics discussed in the correspondence are politics; Byars' literary work and literary issues in general; the newspaper business; and affairs in Kirkwood, Missouri. The series includes some copies of Byars' outgoing correspondence. The series is arranged chronologically.

The Newspaper Men Correspondence Series (1881-1938) consists primarily of correspondence from newspaper men to William V. Byars. The bulk of the correspondence is with Arthur Brisbane. The series also includes some copies of Byars' outgoing correspondence. The series is arranged alphabetically by the name of the correspondence; each correspondent's letters are, in turn, arranged chronologically.

The William Marion Reedy Correspondence Series (1895-1917) consists primarily of correspondence between William V. Byars and William Marion Reedy, editor of Reedy's Mirror. The series includes letters of Reedy to Byars and copies of letters of Byars to Reedy. Much of the correspondence relates to payment for articles Byars wrote for Reedy's Mirror. The series is arranged chronologically.

The General Correspondence Series (1915-1937) consists primarily of correspondence to William V. Byars from numerous correspondents and copies of Byars' outgoing correspondence. Several letters discuss World War I. The series is arranged chronologically.

The Historical Societies Correspondence Series (1937-1938) consists primarily of correspondence of William V. Byars with historical societies. The series is arranged chronologically.

The Postmortem Correspondence Series (1938-1942) consists primarily of correspondence to William V. Byars' children from several correspondents.

The William V. Byars' Writings Series (1895-1949) consists primarily of poems and other writings of William V. Byars.

The James Byars' Correspondence Series (1876-1900) consists primarily of correspondence of James Byars to his son William V. Byars and letters of William V. Byars to his father. The series is arranged chronologically.
